MRS100 / MRS100A

SETTING UP

The MRS100 / MRS100A is a communication adapter designed to convert data from a Mitutoyo device to RS-232 format for use with a PC or other device. A typical application is shown below in which a Mitutoyo travel display mounted to a Mark-10 test stand is connected to a PC using a Mitutoyo cable (available separately) and MRS100A communication adapter:

USING THE MRS100 / MRS100A

Connect the Mitutoyo device as shown in the figure above. Set the communication parameters of the RS-232 channel to 1200 baud, 8 data bits, 1 stop bit, and no parity.

Transmission of data can be initiated by the RS-232 device or software, in which case the MRS100 / MRS100A will automatically translate the data and transmit to the RS-232 device. However, the RS-232 device can request data from the instrument by transmitting ASCII "?" or "X", followed by <CR> or <CR><LF>. Note that no separate power connection to the MRS100 / MRS100A is required, as the power available from the RS-232 channel is sufficient for its operation.
